How do I solve this? Solve $y' = (y^2 + 5)(y + 5)$ if $y(2) = 0$?

I used methods of separation and did a partial fraction integral and ended up with

$$(\ln(y+5)-\ln(y-5))/10 = x$$

I'm not sure if I did this correctly nor do I know how to solve for y at this point. Please send help! Thank you.

PLZ HELP ME ILL MARK BRAINLIEST!!! Humans and dogs evolved from a common ancestor. Which pieces of evidence would support this? CHECK ALL THAT APPLY.

Both of their adult forms look very similar.

They both had a tail as an embryo.

Their arm and leg structure is similar, but may have a different function.

There are fossils of an organism that is half man, half dog in the fossil record.

Both had gill slits when they were born.

New Time Videos (NTV) is a new online video rental service. In the field, it is trying to compete by offering its customers access to all of the major new video releases in one business day. That is, if you order a video from NTV, you can expect it in one business day from the time when you placed the order. When you are done with the video, you simply drop it in the prepaid mailing envelope and return it. All videos arrive in a sorting facility located in the Midwest where envelopes with the videos are opened, checked (right video with the right sleeve, no scratches, no cracks, no dirt on the videos), and made ready to be sent out again. As the manager of this facility, your goal is to turn the returned videos around in 6 hours (a shift is 8 hours long). You have the following information:

Inventory of the video 450,000 per shift

Throughput 345,000 per shift

Calculate the expected average flow time.
